Good Advice. Leaving his car against the curb on the plaza and his overcoat on the seat, a visitor from Phoenix named Ayres stepped into a barbershop to get shaved yesterday forenoon. Returning he started for Jerome with a companion named Spencer, and reaching Whipple took the back track at slow speed to hunt for a $100 Liberty Bond which was missing. It never showed up, and was placed with other papers in a big envelope. He realized what had occurred and stated some "bench warmer" on the plaza is a winner. His advice is to keep on your coat, saying that "it is pretty cold in Prescott." Another case of a Proscottite losing a $100 bond at Nitro, W. The trip was interesting in inspecting the Cathedral Caves, both women venturing below unassisted, to view the wonderful natural creation. This is probably due to them not being shot at in recent years.

Praise Road. Messrs. Tweed and Barry, two commercial men of Phoenix who arrived Friday night in auto, stated they made the trip to Prescott in seven hours and eighteen minutes, stopping at Mayer half an hour and at other places 45 minutes. Spaulding visited this city Sunday from the Binghamton Copper Co. camp at Stoddard, and in speaking of the bond drive, about closed, the first named said: "The bond slacker is as welcome at the Binghamton as the Spanish 'flu' and there is not a case of either affliction at the works; so draw on your imagination as to the situation. Postal Official Here. C. F. Dutton, postoffice inspector of the Arizona division, is in the city and has abandoned a trip to Jerome, owing to the quarantine shut out. He says he does not stay long enough in any locality to get the microbe on his trail and so far has escaped infection.
